Ocean pacific and atlantic the torus shark or ladder (Carcharia Taurus, which should not be confused with which it is known in English as "Bull Shark" -Carcharhinus leucas, - that in Spanish is known as a shark Sardinity and with whom he does not even share a taxonomic order) is a kind of lamniform elasmobchy of the family dentaspiddicore. All is also known as a laundry. They usually remain within the kilometer of their aggregation site, and like to be on the ocean floor. Description The eyes of the Toro shark, lack papers, one of the many distinctive characteristics of the shark. The shape of the head is pointed, while the snout is flattened with a donal form. His body is robust and large volume and his mouth extends more from his eyes. The torus shark usually nothing with open mouth showing three rows of protruding and pointed teeth. Adult sharks have reddish spots scattered throughout the body. The young people have yellow-brown spots on their bodies. The length of the young tiger shark 1.9 to 1.95 m (6.2 to 6.4 feet) in the males and 2.2 m (7.2 feet) in the females, being the females larger than the males . Mature adults reach can a length of 3.0 to 3.4 meters (9.8 to 11.2 feet.) A 50 kg sample (110 lb) of weight is considered medium of size, while a 95 At 110 kg (210 to 240 lb) shows that it is considered normal sizes. It is reported that there are torus sharks that have reached a maximum weight of 159 kg (350 lb.) however, some sources claim that the sample can reach a weight of 300 kg (660 lb.) in August 2007, a Exemplary Albino was photographed outside of South West Rocks, Australia. Behavior Toro shark is a night hunter. It is the only shark known for swallowing and storing it in your stomach, which allows sharks are immobile, floating and silent to not be detected by their prey. The bull shark has been observed in a group hunting on fish cardumenes. How much of the ripe shark, it tends to eat bigger prey including other sharks, dolphins and swordfish. Biologists have observed that sharks usually swallow their entire dam, that if the dam is too large it can cause health problems for sharks as in the esophagus, heart and damage to the liver. Diet The diet of bull sharks consists of fish, small sharks, stripes, crustaceans and blue fin athlete trapped in nets. Interaction with humans The bull is often associated with being vicious or deadly, due to its relatively large size, protuberating teeth that point out to the outside of the mandables, however, are often very docile, and are not often a threat to humans. The bulls swim in the waves of the Atlantico, sometimes human beings, but of 29 reported attacks, only two of them were mortal. Only a few cases of unprovoked attacks of sharks have stumbled upon humans. Underwater fishing can lead to aggressive behavior. When sharks become aggressive, they tend to steal fish or bait instead of human beings who attack. These sharks have also been recently used in a successful experiment in artificial environment. Reproduction The males reach sexual maturity around the six or seven years of age and approximately 1.8 meters (6 feet) of length. Females reach maturity approximately when they are 2 meters (7 feet) long and about nine or ten years old. The mating occurs around the months of March and April in the northern hemisphere. During mating, the male bull grabs the female by the fins with her teeth. This can leave deep cuts that usually heal in a week. The male shark uses clespersmodified pelvic plants), to inseminate the female. The bull shark has one of the lowest reproductive rates of all shark species, therefore, they are easily affected by the pressures of the population. Female bull sharks have two otters. During the early embryonic stages the young absorbs nutrients from the yolk sac and possibly consumes uterine fluids. Approximately 10 centimeters (4 inches) long, embryos developing in the mother's uterus are killed and devoured by the two strongest and largest, a process called intrauterine cannibalism (oophagy). There are reports of biologists who investigate the bellies of landed females and end up with wounds on their fingers because young men with developed teeth bit them. The surviving embryos (one in each otter) continue to feed on 7-23 unfertilized birds in the otters. After a prolonged labor, the female gives birth to a 1 metre (3 feet), completely independent. The gestation period is about eight to nine months. Hydroids grow in the mother's teeth during pregnancy because they stop feeding. Conservation status This species is classified as Vulnerable on the Red List of the International Union for Nature Conservation, and Endangered under the Nature Conservation Act in Queensland 1992.
